PRICES PEGGED FOR 2019

Demand for our Chub, Ide, Barbel and Tench was consistently strong through out the 2018 season. With great summer growing conditions our stock numbers for 2019 are looking good. This means that our prices can stay pegged low.

World Fishing expert Steve Ringer says grow F1 Carp Hybrids

Last winter Chris and Pat had a great catch up with two of our favourite old students and world fishing champion brothers Steve and Phil Ringer.

Based on their vast experience of the match fishing world, they strongly advised us to add F1's to our breeding programme. The advice was taken and the fry were duly stocked out last April.

In this hot summer, they have grown fantastically. As a new species we are offering them to you at a really competitive prices. They are selling fast so book your stock early to avoid disappointment.

New Argulus treatment

Have you followed the EA's new experimental guidelines for controlling Argulus?

It is easy to do. Just bang in a thin stake ie old scaffold pole in three foot of water and drop a six foot black plastic pipe over it.

Every couple of days in the summer reverse the plastic pipe on the pole so that the submerged end is now sticking out above the water and hey presto the Argulus eggs that have been laid on your plastic pipe will dry out and die.

It works... try it!

Winter feeding, use garlic for healthy stock

One of our ex Sparsholt colleagues now Fishery owner Ben Gratwick of Digger Lakes in Devon swears by his winter feeding regime. Here's what works for him. Half a bucket of grain and a table spoon of powdered garlic soaked in water overnight. (Fish love garlic and parasites hate it) Mix in a scoop of carp pellets and feed into a couple of areas. Before feeding check the previous feed has been eaten. He uses a very long handled swimming pool net. He says it keeps his fish in top condition and keeps them feeding on anglers' baits all winter.

Here's the science. Estimate the weight of your stock and feed at just 0.1% body weight when it is cold (under 10). i.e. 1000kg of stock should have just 1 kg of feed put in to maintain their basal energy reserves.
